Public Law 16 Veterans Regulations Clarified

Dr. Lyle K. Henry, University personnel manager, has received instructions concerning such questions as withdrawing from school and transferring from one school to another for all veterans enrolled under Public Laws 16 and 346.

The regulations, which were released by Dr. A. B. Crawford, Veterans Administration Training Officer, follow:

Circular No. 38, February 14, 1946, Veterans Administration, Paragraph 2, states that "A veteran once entered into training under Public Law 16 will be expected to continue through to completion of his training program without interruption in so far as it is possible to do so." Circular No. 38 further states that—

When a veteran under Public Law 16 discontinues his training to enter employment or to take a vacation during a period when training is offered, his training will be interrupted and his status will be training interrupted and a notation "Claimant's own volition." If during this period, the trainee's rating is reduced below pensionable degree, he cannot be reentered into training under Public Law 16.

When training is interrupted by the closing of school for the summer or by reason of sickness or other good reasons, the veteran's training will be placed in the status of training interrupted with the notation "Authorized by V.A." If during this period, the veteran's rating is reduced to less than pensionable degree, he will not lose his educational benefits under Public Law 16. If a veteran withdraws from school without notifying the V.A., and if he desires to reenter training within a reasonable period, he may apply for re-entry into training and due consideration will be given to his application and if the reasons given have sufficient merit, he may be permitted to reenter training under Public Law 16 even though he has lost his pension during the period of interrupted training.

It is important, therefore, for the veteran who is in training under Public Law 16, to notify the V.A. of any intention to abandon training and to explain fully the reasons therefor. This should be done prior to the date of withdrawal from training. Similar information should be given to the institution in which he is pursuing his training. Veterans who do not plan to attend summer school should notify both the institution and the V.A. of this fact prior to withdrawal so that determination can be made as to whether the notation on the Form 1007a should read "Claimant's own volition" or "Authority by V.A." Training officers and others should notify all veterans who are in training.

Helen Hutchcraft Elected YW Head

Helen Hutchcraft, arts and sciences junior from Paris, was chosen president of the YWCA for the coming year in the election held Tuesday. She succeeds Betty Lee Fleischman, senior in arts and sciences, from Lexington.

Other officers elected were Ann Biggerstaff, Lexington, vice-president; Mary Keith Dosker, Louisville, secretary; and Frances Wilhoite, treasurer. They will replace Claudine Gibson, Mary Bennett Lamaster and Joan Scott, under Public Law 16 and the training institutions of the importance of cooperating fully with the V.A. with respect to the question of withdrawals of veterans from training under Public Law 16.

When a veteran who is in training under Public Law 346 withdraws or abandons training without notifying the training institution or the V.A., or if the training institution has been notified but fails to report the information promptly to the V.A., overpayment to the veteran usually results. To avoid complications that arise from overpayment, all trainees under Public Law 346 should be urged to report to the V.A. their intentions of withdrawal prior to the date or immediately following the date of withdrawal, and give reasons therefor. The importance of this matter should be communicated to all veterans in training under Public Law 346 and to institutions which train such veterans.

It has become rather a common practice for veterans in training under Public Law 346 to change institutions and oftentimes to change educational objectives without prior knowledge or approval of the V.A. The regulations are very definite concerning the questions of transfer and changing of educational objectives. A request for a change of course or change of institutions must be "Made in writing by the veteran himself setting forth full information concerning the proposed change, including the reasons for desiring to make it; or if by the educational or training institutions, including the reasons for the recommendation."

The written request must be made to the V.A. and approval obtained before any request for a Supplemental Certificate of Eligibility and Entitlement will be made to the Registration and Research Section. When a veteran re-enters training under Public Law 346 in the same institution, this fact should be noted on Form 178.

Plan To Limit Number Of Activities Per Person Will Highlight Meeting

By Pat Barnett
Kernel News Editor

The Student Activities file, a system for rationing student activity on the University campus, will be considered at a meeting of the Student Government Association to be held at 5 p.m. Monday in the Union building.

A special student activities committee, headed by Dick Lowe, has been working for two quarters on plans for the proposed Activities File system. The motion for investigation of possibilities for such a system by the Student Government Association was passed during the 1945 spring quarter, when SGA was under the leadership of Clay Salyer. Salyer left the University in December and Charles Gardner succeeded him. No definite action was taken by the committee until the winter quarter; at the last SGA meeting before the end of the quarter, the report of the committee was submitted to the assembly.

If the plan of the committee is adopted, a Student Activities point board, composed of two SGA members elected by the assembly; one male student chosen by Dean T. T. Jones, one woman student chosen by Dean Sarah B. Holmes, and two faculty advisers would govern the number of student activities.

Under the proposed system, each student would be allotted 12 points, and a secretary would be employed to keep records of student activities. Points would be determined by the committee. The full report of the committee follows:

"The committee for investigating the possibility of organizing a Student Activities Point system on the University of Kentucky campus is presenting the following report:

"Realizing that the purpose of this organization shall be to regulate and limit the participation of all students in extra-curricular activities so that more persons may have a chance to participate and so that a few individuals are not overburdened, we make the following suggestions:

"1. That the number of activities in which a student of the University may engage be governed by a Student Activities Point board. Certain points are to be accredited for activities according to a table attached.

"2. That 12 points will be the maximum a student may carry.

"3. That the Student Activities Point board be composed of two persons chosen from the Student Government Association, one male student chosen by Dean Jones, one woman student chosen by Dean Holmes, and two faculty advisers.

"4. Any student on probation is allowed only membership in an organization.

"The points as designated by the committee are as follows:

Honor societies: Alpha Lambda Delta, Beta Gamma Sigma, Kappa Delta Pi, Order of the Coif, Phi Beta Kappa; president, 3 points; officer, 2 points; member, 1 point. Leadership societies: Cwens, president, 3 points; officer, 2 points; member, 1 point; Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa, president, 5 points; officer, 3 points; member, 2 points.

If this column gets to look like Elbert Hubbard's Scrapbook, don't say we didn't warn you! Lately, we've been walking around with our eyes open—and, therefore, we've discovered countless amazing things. One of those things is: Other People write poetry too. And, after careful cogitation, we decided that Other People write Better Poetry. So instead of tapping our limited mental supply, we'll just sprinkle Other People's writings out of our little two or three columns. The following tidbit comes from the type-writer of Kernel Business Manager Tom Gregory.

ENGAGED

A ring
A little thing
Conveys
In sparkling ways
Evidence
Of large events
Concerning
New ways of learning
Of happiness
For two in love.

If anyone hatches a poem, profound thought or gripe or anything, just send it to us and we'll fill up the column with your junk instead of our own.

We heard of a soldier who went to his camp library and asked the librarian for a book called The Red Sail Boat. Not having heard of the book, the librarian asked the GI if he was sure of the title. He admitted that he wasn't at all certain, but he was sure of the title. He eventually discovered that the book he wanted was The Rubaiyat.

We weren't going to say anything, but it's got to come out. Tom's poem ENGAGED brought it on. We don't like engagement rings. Not diamond ones, anyway. There's nothing beautiful or warm about a cold rock that's trying to outcarat somebody else's carat or two. And no matter what your ring looks like, people always tell you how perfectly gorgeous it is. They have to. But worse than getting a Mine-Is-Bigger-Than-Yours diamond, is this new-fangled idea of getting and wearing a little sparkler for a few years and then, after hubby is in the chips, throwing it away in favor of a bigger and better one. We don't see any tie whatsoever between the size of diamonds and true love.

If anyone on campus has a cold, just visit us at the dorm and we'll cure it in seconds. All you have to do is inhale a little DDT powder. We asked the druggist for a DDT bomb, but when he learned that we wanted to annihilate only one roach, he suggested that we use the powder instead. So we waited for the little intruder to appear, and then we heaped the DDT all over his unsuspecting body. We caged him and then watched to see how long it would take to send him to the Happy Hunting Grounds. After watching for twenty minutes, we were forced to drown him. But the darn thing knew how to swim. So we hit him on the head, killed him, and wondered about DDT. Anyway, we inhaled it and it cured our cold.

There's a book entitled Souvenir being sold in the bookstore. It's a collection of poems by Eunice Adams. It's terrible. But one decent poem strayed into the company of those shameful others that bears re-printing. So here is part of Eunice Adams' LESSON IN GRAMMAR: Love, A Part of Speech.

(I never dreamed that it could be defined
In terms of muscles, rather than in certain Happy attitudes and states of mind)

I finally awakened to discover
That you had only sought to be my lover;
That what I thought a noun,
abstract but true,
Was nothing but an active verb to you.

Life, Liberty, and Pursuit

By Adele Denman

LIFE: There comes a time in everyone's life when a change occurs in the environment around them. The campus is going from the rigor mortis stage to the point which we hope will make the song, "Seems Like Old Times," a real hit. Now the men are all clad in air corps pants and reindeer sweaters. This reindeer craze has really taken hold.

Now it is a challenge as to which man can have the most reindeer on his sweater. In fact an old steady of one fellow was sitting cozily on the couch, as she had sat 100 times before, waiting for him to mention the question. In came the gay young something or the other, with his reindeer sweater in full bloom. He did not waste words, but dropped to his knees. "How utterly Victorian," the girl whispered to herself, "now here it comes." It came! The question was—"Darling—er—will you—er—KNIT ANOTHER REINDEER ON MY SWEATER?"

The "Silent Sigs" of the Phi Epsilon clan entertained with a party Saturday, and from all we can gather, everything was strictly on the QT. In fact it was so quiet, not the party but the atmosphere over the blankets, that they had the nerve to announce in Sunday's paper that the fraternity entertained with a party for a group of hushees. May I venture to whisper a question, WHAT'S THE BIG SECRET?

Spinnny Merwin has mentioned to several people that the rat has been returned to its former owners and everything is happy on South Line. Notice to women with cars. This week is hell week. Naturally all the men will be taking small road trips, and you too, can be of service. The best place to find men in gutters is the Kentucky river area. From what we hear, that is where the actives dump most of their pledges.

Notice to everyone: Don't bother the toothbrushes around the necks of Sig Ep pledges. I know you are all bored with hearing about the atom, but have you seen the signs about the campus? Seems that the campus League of Women Voters will listen to a speech entitled "Have You Caught Up With The Atom?" Really girls, haven't you anything better to chase?

LIBERTY: It is doubtful as to whether the Veterans' club or SGA is running the politics on this campus. If one would question thoroughly he would find that most of the student body is of the opinion that the vets' club is doing it, and doing a better job of it. Let this be a warning to you new members, whoever you may be. If you are going to take a responsibility, do something with it. You should remember Article 1, Section 2, of your constitution.

"The purpose of the SGA is to act as the responsible authority in relations among students and among student organizations; to act jointly up with the University staff in matters affecting common interests; and to advise, request, and recommend action with respect to matters reserved to the University staff."

Isn't anyone going to do something about the traffic jams at McVey hall? The stock excuse for being late to class is that the offender was caught in a mob. Why not use the right steps for coming down and the left for going up?

PURSUIT: We understand that Dick Linn has been pinned. This story was relayed to me by a Tri-Delt, so check all you want.

It was another week at the KKG house: Polly Gallagher engaged to Bobby Gateskel, Brownie Talbott was engaged to Bob Alexander, Margaret Champ is pinned. Ethel Blanton went the ring way. Wally Evans is engaged to Baylor Landrum.

So you can see why the little rushee was heard to say, "I'd like to go KKG, but I'm not sure whether or not I'm ready to get married yet."

Is Dick Hensley letting the home town girl down? It seems to be pinning week with the Tri Deltas. Namely Francis Draffen to Pete Wickliffe (Beta); Angela Meisch to Bill Blair (KA); Carolyn Gilson to Billy Gabbard (SAE). Who said the Diddie Dee's weren't stuck up? Their battle cry to the Kappas is "We're not engaged yet—but we're on our way."

NOTICE: Good looking women that want to meet vets—call 7654-X —BTO's from not only ETO—but world wide.

Rumor has it that Wally Briggs has been cutting the lines in the new play. "How noble," everyone said. "So nice of him to save our feelings." When he had finished cutting, they discovered that he had cut all the mild lines and left the outspoken ones. Seems that this new play will be worth seeing.

Mary Margaret Marks and Clay Salyer have been carrying an old acquaintance still further. Jim Wyatt had a flash bulb camera at the river last Saturday. Who says he is above blackmail?

Youngman is pinned again. Same girl, same station. A new vet, Dick Anderson, did not lose any time in getting acquainted with the girls on the campus. At least not with Francis Jenkins.

A big case on the docket is Meg Tindler and Ben Sullivan! Al Peed and Betty Brooker might bear watching. Seen at the Sig Ep weiner roast at the river Saturday night: Jean Spicer and Jimmy Maynard; Nadine Finnie and Dan Rawlings; Violet Jones and Charley Barley. Mention the name "Lucille" and around Carl "Hoot" Combs and watch the results.

A high school romance that ended in an engagement: Gertrude Caywood and Billy Champion.

Why Ration Activities?

Approximately 50 student organizations are active on the campus, in addition to at least 18 professional fraternities and 10 or more honorary organizations. This seems to provide ample opportunity for extracurricular participation on the part of every student, as well as the chance to take the lead and hold some responsible office.

But the president of one organization is, nine times out of ten, secretary or vice-president of another club or two. Realizing that this situation neither takes advantage of all available talent, nor allows over-worked activity hounds to do justice to the positions they hold, SGA has been considering a point system for the University.

Under the proposed system, a students activities point board composed of two SGA members, one male student chosen by Dean T. T. Jones, one woman student chosen by Dean Sarah B. Holmes, and two faculty advisers, would govern the number of student activities. Twelve points would be the limit—and a secretary would be employed to keep records of student activities.

Admittedly something has to be done. But this system isn't it. Instead of encouraging potential leaders this will discourage those who are already active. Instead of clamping a rigid control upon the campus such as this, SGA might well attempt reform through the organizations themselves. A qualification for holding an office should be that the candidate has the time and should not be already busy with other responsibilities. Nominating committees should be instructed to keep this in mind. It should be a sign of inefficiency to have a block-long string of activities after one's name instead of an honor as some students seem to think it is. And this instruction and any rulings can be made within the organizations and not through student government regulations. And it wouldn't be necessary to employ a secretary!

Organizational control can be just as effective as rigid all-over regulation—and would not be undesirable in fact as well as in principle as is the point system. It isn't necessary for the Student Government Association—representative body though it may be—to tell individual students what they can or can't do in matters as personal as activities. It isn't necessary, and what's more, it just isn't democratic.

Most students would resent very much such action. They realize that the same individuals are holding entirely too many of the top campus positions—but they also know that these students are in many cases the only ones who are willing to work.

When the point system comes before the SGA assembly Monday for consideration they should think long and seriously before approving such a drastic and far-reaching measure. There must be some alternative more welcome to the student body—and not so dictatorial. Must activities be rationed, too?

Labor and capital will air their troubles in the national bituminous coal strike Monday night at the meeting of the University Veterans' club in Memorial hall. The meeting will be open to the public—and it should be interesting to hear what Tom Rainey, president of United Mine Workers No. 15, and the representatives of the operators will have to say.

Those Lawless Vets

This article was submitted by the Veterans' club, and because of timeliness and editorial value, The Kernel is including it in its regular editorial column.

Doughnuts will get you dollars that before very long you will be hearing a lot about a crime wave created by servicemen who have lost their respect for law and order.

Already the news columns are peppered with items about violent crimes committed by ex-servicemen—armed holdups and even an occasional homicide of greed or of passion.

Lumped together statistically, these will confirm the worst fears of those who have been saying that you can't take 11 million young men in their impressionable years, inspire and teach them to kill, without destroying their moral fiber.

In anticipation of this imminent furore, we want to go on record in denunciation of the statistics we haven't seen, and in defense of the veterans both as a group and, for the most part, as individuals.

The veterans are not so many statistical fictions, so many impersonal strangers. They are our sons, our brothers, our husbands, our nephews, the boys next door, the men who left desks in our offices or machines in our factories. They're just as bad and just as good as our relatives, our neighbors, our fellow-workers, because that is what they are.

Has your son, your brother, your husband lost all moral perspective and become a potential criminal? Has the boy next door, who used to roll hoops with your children, become an unabashed killer? Why, then, suppose that the veterans, as a class, have done so?

You cannot take 11 million young men by lot without getting a few score thousands of actual or potential criminals. There would have been stealing, robbing, gypping, killing if they never had seen a uniform. Some of them are now.

Add up the crimes committed by ex-servicemen and they will make the disturbing statistics that will be tossed at you. But contrast them with the total of all crime, and we think you will find that the veteran will be doing less than his share.

For every youngster who has been brutalized by war service, we think that you will find another who has been reclaimed by military discipline and by association with moral and ethical superiors.

For some time to come the veteran will be going through a difficult period of psychological and economic reconversion, perhaps. But it is not going to be one of moral reconversion. These boys aren't tramps, or brutes. They're our boys.

In the sun-shines-bright state we've been having what the chamber of commerce would call California weather. Too bad, a muddy track on the first day of the races at Keeneland.

'Sweet Talk' About Courtin'

Now your mama done told you many times about this old courtin' business. Boys and girls have been making love an active verb as well as a noun (see Fischer's column) since the very first spring—but it should be a private affair. A little fond affection just between the two of you is delightful—but when you let the whole campus in on it somehow is disgusting.

Any public demonstration is in poor taste, and not only reflects upon the individuals but on the University. Visitors and passersby understand, and may carry away a harmful, ugly impression. The deans and many students are becoming perturbed about some of the very frank sessions in the most obvious campus spots. So for the sake of the University's reputation if you are unconcerned about your own, kindly cuddle in a corner—some nice private little corner!

The House Presidents' Council has something to say on the subject:

Dear Editor,

Numerous complaints have brought to our attention a matter which many students have recognized as a problem for quite some time. This problem, to put it quite bluntly, is the one of campus courting.

We have a beautiful campus. Much effort and planning has gone into the landscaping of it so that it will be one of the most outstanding in the country. It is difficult to be proud of our campus, however, when we can't see the beauties of it because of the couples lolling on the grass. This definitely detracts from the appearance of the campus.

Last weekend the University was host to the state speech contest. These high school students were our guests and many of us were embarrassed to show them the campus. They, too, were embarrassed. They will carry back to their homes and to the rest of the state the impression which they undoubtedly received.

We, the House Presidents' Council, should like to enlist the aid of other organizations and each individual student in solving this problem and in keeping our campus as lovely as possible.

Vet About UK

By Clayton Roland

Springtime, Coal Miners and Vets
Someone has remarked that a sure sign of spring is given each year about this time by something coming up out of the ground. That something is John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers of America.

Many servicemen during the war were not exactly pleased with the antics of the famous Mr. Lewis. One GI returning home from Africa is alleged to have called on Mr. Lewis in Washington and, practiced his battle-learned fistfists, with the famous gentleman in question.

This was while the war was still in progress and the GI had no way of investigating the strike situation for himself. The miners are again on strike and it is now the ex-GIs who are wondering about the whys and wherefores.

This long thirst for information will be quenched next Monday night in Memorial hall when representatives of the union and coal operators will submit themselves to a round table discussion at the Veterans club meeting.

The highlights of the meeting will be recorded and featured on the "Voice of the Veteran" radio program over WLAP at 7:30 p.m. April 17.

The Bo(w) les Have It

The name of Boles is turning out to be an important name in the veterans' scheme of things. S. A. Boles, new manager of Cooperstown, is the third such to figure in the news recently. The other two are Howard C. Bowles of Hazard, Veterans' club president and Chester

Bowles of Washington, who is championing the cause of veterans in national affairs.

Sign-Up For a Vet

The veterans info desk in the Union building on registration day was prepared to dispense all types of information. And it did. Questions asked included such as: Do we get our registration fee returned if Russia attacks Iran? Do the ex-privates have to fall in at the rear of the line to register?

But the best one was asked by a coed who stopped at the Vet club membership table and asked "Is this the place you sign-up for a vet?"

Spring Dance April 27th

Tickets for the spring dance set for April 27th will go on sale at the club meeting Monday night. The cost will be $1.50 for a couple or stag. The name of the orchestra will be released later, according to Darrell Hancock, chairman of the social committee.

Up In Room 204

The question has arisen with certain individual veterans concerning the quality and type of books and supplies authorized under the G. I. Bill of Rights. To obtain an answer to this question, we called on Dr. Lyle K. Henry, assistant director of personnel, who gave us the following information as quoted from Veteran Administration (VA) regulations:

"Such items will consist only of those which are required of other students pursuing the same or comparable courses, and in no instance will be greater in variety, quality or amount than are required of other students. Items which are commonly used for personal purposes such as fountain pens, brief cases, typewriters, etc., although also used in connection with the course of education or training will not be provided by the VA."

What is required of each course is normally determined by the instructor who has also given the Campus Bookstore a list of these required books and supplies.

Books and supplies will not be authorized by VA for auditing courses.

Dr. Crawford Has Message

Dr. A. B. Crawford, training officer of the Veterans Administration, met Wednesday of last week with the veterans attending school under Public Law 16.

He emphasized that it was important for vets attending under this bill to remain in school during the summer sessions. Any veteran under Public Law 16 who does not wish to attend summer school should apply in writing to the Veterans Administration, Lexington, asking permission to interrupt his training during the summer.

Dr. Crawford stated that it was necessary to see all people under P. L. 16 again during the quarter. This will probably be done in the first week of May and all vets attending under P. L. 16 are urged to watch for announcements of these meetings and attend at the prescribed time.

The Varsity Show

By HUGH COLLETT

"Would you tell me when the next mail goes in the boxes?"
"The postcards, please."

"How much for a half-ounce first-class letter to Calcutta?"

These questions and many more are answered by Miss Carey Bean, postmistress, and her helpers every day.

Miss Bean, congenial lady of the University station, has been dishing out stamps and information to UK students for the past thirty-two years.

On April 26, 1914, Miss Bean put the first book on the shelf of the combined bookstore-postoffice. At that time, her offices were located in what is now the president's office in the Administration building. Later the offices were moved to the basement of the same building, and with the coming of Dr. Frank L. McVey and a new era, the offices were set up in the gymnasium where they stayed until 1928. While located in the gym, the offices were flooded twice, ruining many dollars worth of stamps.

After replacing all lost materials and fearing additional floods—the present site of the Union building was then a spring-fed lake—Miss Bean gathered up her equipment and headed for the basement of McVey hall and to the present location of the postoffice. The bookstore was combined with the post office and under Miss Bean's supervision until 1930, when they became separate businesses.

The University station did not become recognized as a bonafide post office until 1925.

At present, there are 3,000 post office boxes in the University station, and 2,000 more have been ordered to take care of the enlarged enrollment.

Miss Bean, who has seen University men leave for the services in two wars, says that it is a "real joy to have the boys back."

NOT BEING AMONG the enlightened concerning the quirks and ritual of baseball games, we got quite a "charge" at the diamond game last Tuesday. At the end of the sixth quarter—or inning that is—all of a sudden, everybody got out of his seat and started stretching. We were informed that this was the regular "seventh inning stretch." We were disgusted; we didn't know that the stretch was coming, and so we stretched between the fifth and sixth innings. Consequently, had no reason to perform the ritual at the specified time. A SOOPER SALESMAN is in the makings! One of the junior-salesmen at the ball game was really plugging his product. He kept yelling, "Ice cream. Ice-cold ice cream. We couldn't resist. NOTE TO PING PONG AND POOL PLAYERS: Have you been in the Union game room since it got its face lifted? If you have, have you noticed the odd shades of paint covering the walls? If you haven't, you're no pool or ping pong player. Nevertheless, for those who engage in the sports of the cue stick and the celluloid ball, we offer this explanation of the paint (we got it from an expert!). When the walls were white, there was no contrast between the walls and the ping-pong balls; the brown balls "enrich the pure whiteness" of the celluloid sphere and make it easier to see. Our only objection to the dirty brown walls: they were painted a cue-ball brown, and now you can't see the cue ball.

ADVICE TO STUDENTS not wearing sun glasses: Do not enter the Union by way of the back door. The blue paint the higher-ups selected to adorn the back stair walls make a study in vibration. They're sickening on an empty stomach. DICK LINN has paid us fifty cents to print the following statement and an additional ten cents to print his name, as above, in big print: "It could happen to any body." (For reference, read Denman's Life, Liberty and Pursuit—Plug.)

Who Lost That Bag?

The Purdue Exponent ran an article in last week's issue which may be of interest to some UK coed. The article follows:

"Enroute from Chicago to Cincinnati last Tuesday afternoon, a University of Kentucky coed lost her black grained-leather suitcase on the New York Central train. In an effort to trace its whereabouts, she has contacted Dean Clare A. Colledge and asked for help.

"Since there were a large number of Purdue students on the same train, there is a possibility that one of them may have picked up the suitcase by mistake. If anyone has information on the subject he should get in touch with Dean Colledge as soon as possible."

The Kernel asks: "Has it been found?"

The Theme, Spirit, Argument Of Fraternity System

By Adele Denman

We have now had the statistical approach and the reactionary answer to the question of the utility and the democracy in Greek groups, and as usual, each approach has ignored the obvious—the human side of the problem.

With an endeavor to give honestly a group of opinions which have invaded the student mind of late, let us gather what may be considered the four most important human sides of the Greek theory of justification for its existence. For convenience's sake let us select the aims, the theme, the spirit, and the argument.

The aims of the Greeks feed upon two things as normal as eating and drinking: the desire for recognition, and the desire for security. It is only human to desire to benefit one's fellows, and not everyone has the inborn ability to secure that goal on his own. For instance, one desires a certain office on the campus—a position which may make use of his talents to the best advantage. Not everyone is given that opportunity—the chance to make of himself an instrument of betterment in our campus world.

Quite naturally, he allies himself with a group which has that objective in mind. It is a political move, which, in spite of our wild ravings about slighting democracy on the campus, is the basis of our democratic system in everyday life. An ambitious man, who believes that he may be of use, must first ally himself with the party of his choice. In that party he is weighed and his worth tested.

This is true within the Greek group—a man receives the strongest criticism from his own adopted brothers. Therefore he has the security of knowing that if he has something to offer, he has sixty or seventy voices to add weight to his purpose, and having that faith, the timid soul may have confidence to attain his ends.

The critics claim that the greatest fallacy in the Greek scheme of things is the theme. They claim that an emotional appeal will bring more contempt than admiration from a trained young mind than anything heretofore attempted. In short, the Greek pin, the worship of a mythical Greek hero, and the mystic of a ritual, which according to them have little use or significance, are insults to the progressive and realistic individual.

In other words, they assert, the fraternity system is out-of-date. Therefore these ideals are a handicap to any organization with a useful purpose, and in defending them, there has never been any convincing argument given. The inconsistency arises from fraternities having to succumb to the humiliation of childish rush systems based on the social level of the individual's family prestige.

Having little wish to dispute the admittedly indisputable words of the wise critics, we should like to ask them one question: "Who may truly interpret, unless he first has a principle or code for ethical purpose?" In our days of complicated simplifications, and mass-produced brains which roll off the assembly lines of technical education, we have little regard for romantic ideals which produce, strangely enough, those qualities which the mighty crafts and techniques have never successfully duplicated—the qualities of loyalty and good will.

These give the newly acquainted a brotherhood for the interpretation of those principles so simply presented in the beauty and dignity of Greek mythology. If scientific rationalism could produce those emotions then they would be used for all their worth.

Take the realm of poetry which man has perused and pronounced great. Why? Because these simple philosophies are principles which we may interpret with the instruments available to us in everyday life. Still others of us will deride them for being unscientific. Man will always condemn what he cannot recognize with his own personal language and eye of value. "It is a great man who can have a universal eye and speak a universal language." But if we changed the names of these principles, and called them not Greek mythologies, but constitutions, and called the rushing systems political campaigns rather than rush weeks, would the critic cease his "Wolf, wolf" of "undemocratic"?

All very well and good, the critic may answer, but are these principles interpreted in the honest and sincere way that the writer implied?

That leads us to our third point, that of spirit. Take the gay fraternity man who chases sparrows at midnight, who is seen in the bars, who speaks only to certain persons on the campus, and is the snooty sophisticate, who has little regard for anything more than the knife-edge crease in his pants.

Four months ago he entered college with the casual abandon of the rugged individualist. Maybe he didn't have money to burn, but through helpful criticism from his fellows he was able to make the most of what he did have. The fact that he is shallow, and superficial is his own shortcoming—not of his fraternity. So he speaks only to certain people on the campus—don't you? "Yes," you retort, "but they are the people that I know." Well, in many instances it is the same way with him. Fraternity membership does not necessarily grant its holder an instant memory of the student directory any more than it makes a stable, mature person from a playboy. One handicap of fraternity life is that one is not always able to meet all the new people he would like to. So the fraternity man drinks. Haven't you ever been in a bar?

As far as chasing sparrows is concerned, well, you've done more ridiculous things yourself, and with no stimulation from a fraternity member.

So we have normal people, with normal habits, faults, and inclinations, the critic admits, but what about the way they fight among themselves? In answer to this, the student mind must agree with the critic. The fraternity is not nearly so vulnerable as it thinks it is. The fraternity talks too much. It sometimes contains members who think only of their own personal ambitions. By making accusations frantically against outsiders, they hope to receive personal glory as being defenders of the cause. Unfortunately sometimes these accusations are believed, and the offender is the victim of mass reaction rather than an individual investigation. This mass inferiority complex should not exist in these groups, but unfortunately we see this psychological term riding the lives of individuals every day. Rest assured that it is fought effectively by the members themselves—but everyone is not fool-proof. They try and hope they can correct their own faults.

Now here is the argument. Men will always organize groups, because it is a natural tendency for a man to want to become a part of a whole larger than himself. Many of us realize the futility of trying to live in a cabin on the banks of Walden pond. First we would have to pay taxes on the land, or rent to the landlord, buy hunting and fishing licenses, be included in the census, go to war, and perhaps vote. There are demands on every citizen—for again he is a part of a whole. Here in our college life there are demands on us, and if we may more efficiently meet those demands through the helpful assistance of an organized group, how can we be considered unwise?

We have the power to select our group; our group has the power to select us. And there is more included on a recommendation form than papa and mama: there are certain incidents which include scholastic average, leadership qualifications, preparation for certain arts and sciences, character, ethical attitudes, and most of the other credentials which one must mention in order to obtain admittance to any state university.

The mass faults that are attributed to the fraternity are so human that anyone should be able to recognize that they are faults of individuals themselves—faults which the principles upon which the group is founded will never let them forget, and which they are constantly trying to correct.

Because the strength of purpose within most fraternities is so great, they do not take chances—they take the best raw material at hand with which to work. Whether the method of selection is correct or not is debatable, and can only be justified by comparison with other means of selection throughout any democracy. A careful investigation will prove that there is little difference. It is human, it is earthy, but it is none the less true.

But what are we going to do about it, the critic asks, there is bound to be something. Well, a man hit on the answer long before you did. Whether Greek or independent, worker or executive, poet or tech-

Frosh Making Standings Increased Since 1938

By Jim Wood

The number of first quarter freshmen making standings at the University has greatly increased since the fall semester of 1938, according to Dr. M. M. White, head of the Department of Psychology and formerly associated dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

In the 1945 fall quarter, 70 per cent of the freshmen veterans made standings, in contrast to only 23 per cent of the 1938 fall semester freshman civilian class.

However, it is possible that ability of the veterans is not any higher than that of the civilians, but only that the general level of over-all student ability is greater, Dr. White stated.

Dr. White has interviewed hundreds of students who have been in poor scholastic standing at the University and says that students seldom fail or make poor grades because of lack of native ability, although in the past 10 years he has known only one student ranking in the lower 20 per cent on University, this universal law holds true: "This above all: to thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

sity entrance exams who has graduated from college.

This must not be taken as completely accurate because many of these students may have transferred to another college, Dr. White explained.

Many students were on probation during the winter quarter and most who failed to pass the minimum of 12 quarter hours of work that quarter were dropped from the University.

In unusual cases the students may apply to the committee on scholastic achievement, composed of the deans of the University, and be examined for re-admittance. If he is judged to be of ability to make his grades he may be re-admitted.

Students who come to the University with a good high-school background in English and mathematics seldom have difficulty with their subjects, Dr. White explained, stating that a weakness in either of these subjects usually causes scholastic difficulty.

Dr. White gave the following general reasons why most students have difficulty at the University: (1) Too many outside interests; (2) Insufficient knowledge of English and mathematics; (3) Too frequent trips home; (4) Too heavy

Opinion 50-50 On File System Considered By SGA Assembly

By Tommy Gish

For the past few months the Student Government Association has been considering regulation of the number of extra-curricular activities in which a student may participate on the campus. Interested in discovering what student reaction to such regulation would be, this reporter interviewed 20 students, chosen at random.

One SGA member explained to the reporter that under the proposed system each student would be allotted a fixed number of points, and each activity on the campus would be scored according to its importance and the amount of time involved.

"Do you think that SGA should limit the number of extra-curricular activities in which a student may participate?" Nine of the students interviewed answered yes to this question, while nine were opposed. Two expressed no opinion.

Opinion was divided along definite lines. With a few exceptions, those in activities were convinced that there should be no regulation, while those who do not participate said that there was a need for it. The more activities a student had, the stronger his opposition to the proposal.

class loads; (5) Commuting between home and school; (6) Divorce and separation in the home; (7) Illness; (8) Lack of interest.

Students who make more than three trips home during the quarter are usually scholastically lower than many others. These too frequent trips commonly prove to be trips of "dissatisfaction" with the University because of social life or maladjustment.

Commuters many times make low grades because of trip fatigue which results from long car, train or bus rides.

Generally, most students at the University are capable of doing college work, but the reasons why they many times make poor scholars is a difficult question, the answer to which is still vague and can only come through a complete study of all students, Dr. White says.

One veteran, who has returned to the University after two years' absence, said: "Now that enrollment has jumped, there is no need of a few persons running the campus. There might have been some justification of BMOCs (Big Men On Campus) during the war, but there's none now."

Another veteran, a freshman, said that perhaps such regulation would be the best way to get rid of the women holding office and "lousing up the campus."

A junior woman, who holds two responsible campus positions, said that regulation wouldn't work. "There is in every organization a handful of who are willing to work regularly and to keep the organization going. Other members say that they would like to work, but they are always too busy."

"Because these few prove to be leaders in one organization, they join others and become leaders there, too. It is the fact that most students aren't interested enough that makes it necessary for a few to run the organizations," she concluded.

Another woman, a senior, thought that all organizations on the campus are run by the same small clique and that other students have little chance of breaking into the inner-circle.

"There are too many Big Time Operators on the campus, and it's time SGA did something to get rid of them," said one sophomore in the Engineering college.

"It would be a shame to penalize students with a little initiative just because other students won't take any interest in campus organizations," stated one Arts and Sciences freshman.

One of the students expressing no opinion said he would have to wait and see how strict the limitations were before he would make up his mind. The other was a new student who came here this quarter.

Although such a small number of interviewees cannot be considered at all representative, there is obviously enough differing opinion on the issue for it to be considered seriously before any definite action can be taken by SGA.

Men Still Top Coed Topic

By Margaret Dickey

Crowded conditions and lots of new men are the subjects of conversation among "us girls" these days. Men are first on the list and opinions differ as to the change the masculine addition has brought about.

One girl said, "It's wonderful, but I haven't met any of them." Another said, "We sure do like the new football prospects."

The advent of men has apparently brought about a change in the attitudes of the girls themselves. One coed remarked that the girls seem to be better dressed and blue jeans have disappeared even on the rainiest of days. Husband-hunting girls have also come back with the veterans, so beware boys.

One girl was still dazed over the fact that a masculine voice had asked her in the bookstore if he could wait on her. A few minutes later she went to the library and a male librarian found the book she wanted.

Your reporter couldn't suppress a giggle when one forlorn little coed said, "Men don't affect me much, but I'd like it if they did."

Crowded classes have also become popular as an after dinner subject. One coed was convinced that competition had become much keener with the addition of more graduate students, especially those who have been teaching. Grades also seem to be more important than they were in war days. To many of the students, the crowded classes are much more interesting.

Many of the girls who were here during the war feel that the old crowd is still the same with the addition of only a few. The same people are still seen at the Canary Cottage, but the smaller places like the Tavern have been taken over by the new students. Some of the girls feel that the old crowds are fading into the background.

One girl voiced an opinion that meeting new students will be impossible unless the sweater swings and Saturday night dances are returned to us.

As an added thought, the girls are glad that the married veterans have those bright, bold bands on their third finger, left hand. As one girl remarked, "You know whom to leave alone and whom to chase."

Faces Are Red, Grass Turns Green

By Bettie Tuttle

A girl limps into the classroom—her face resembling a raw beet. There is little difference between her legs and two catsup bottles. She sits down gingerly, having blistered the backs of her legs. It is impossible for her to lean back because of her boiled-lobster-colored back. Constantly, she is squirming and pulling at what little clothing she has on away from her burning body. What does she care? She'll have a nice tan tomorrow. Spring is here!

Get Off! Thank You!

At this time, the grass is not allowed to grow. Couples who lounge comfortably on the campus grounds kill the grass. All over the campus can be seen youthful figures(?) relaxing on the cool green velvet carpet. Mother Nature must hate them for killing one of her children.

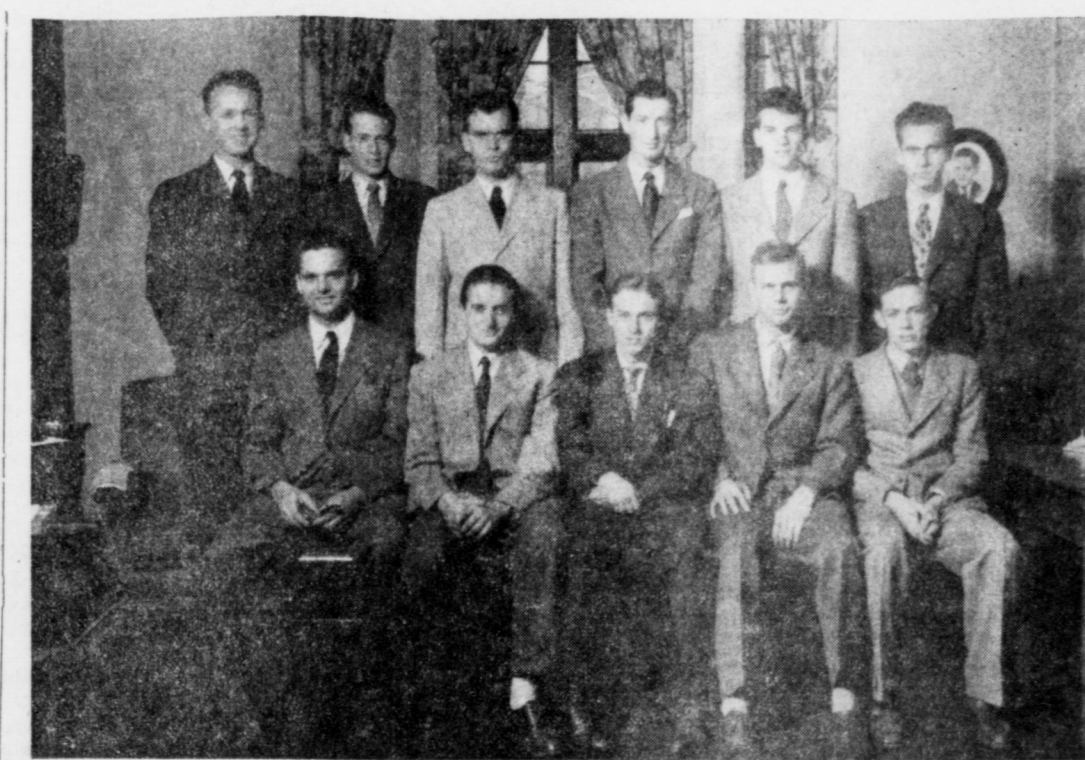

Oh, For A Dog's Life!

Dogs are having their "hey-day" during this season. All over the campus are seen canines of all descriptions. They lie around on the grass to the envy of the student body—en masse. Often a mongrel strolls into a classroom. However, he does not stay there very long; he isn't so dumb. No stuffy classroom for him when the out of doors is calling. At this time of the year, everyone is envious of animal life, that is the four-footed type.

The House of Knowledge

The library, usually full of students, is now practically empty. Books are the least of students' worries. Although this is the coolest building on the campus, it is very unpopular with people. Only the eagerest of beavers are seen in the library on these spring days.

Professors, even the energetic ones, are beginning to feel the ef-

Two Chi-O Chapters Celebrate Eleusinia

Lambda Alpha and Chi chapters of Chi Omega celebrated their annuual spring Eleusinia with a Founders' Day banquet in the Gold Room of the Lafayette Hotel Saturday evening. Approximately 100 alumnae, actives and pledges attended. This joint dinner of University of Kentucky and Transylvania chapters was also the occasion for presentation of awards to individuals of each chapter.

Barbara Lee Cole, retiring president of Chi, served as toast-mistress and presented the following awards: Scholarship, Ann Sheets; Best Pledge, Carolyn Pittinger; Best Pledge Notebook, Betty Jean Willis; Model Initiate, Charlotte Wintz.

Lee Trabue, president, announced the awards for Lambda Alpha: Outstanding Senior, Betty Clardy; Most Improvement in Scholarship, Mary Kassenbrock; Best Pledge, Jane Garrett; Best Pledge Notebook, Jane Wood; Honorable mention, Ann Jillson; Model Initiate, Elizabeth Ann Bicknell.

Miss Ann Moore, alumni of Chi and newly appointed adviser, spoke on fraternities and their effects and advantages in post-college life.

The Annual Suntan Struggle

By Marjorie Taylor

Is it worth it? The agony and battle that co-eds put up with to acquire that golden brown known as a sun-tan, I mean.

You rosy-skinned she-worshippers of Sol and you males who can fly a plane any day between the hours of sunrise and sunset can find a bevy of coeds roasting themselves on the Jewell hall roof.

Is it a desire to absorb the heat, the race for the darkest complexion, or the stimulating clash with the wind to lay the blanket flat that thus inspires our young womanhood upward and onward?

Struggle With Wind

The laying of the blanket is only the first struggle with the wind. All the time she is cooking, the aspirant must make grabs at towels, glasses, and cigarettes which sail merrily away to the far reaches of the roof.

Then, when she has been broiled in oil for a few hours, comes the pay-off. Aye, there's the rub. (Don't dare touch me!) Our little lobster writhes in the agony that only the sun-burned know. And then a few days later, she peels off most of her hard-earned coat.

Worth It?

One coed, whose eyes had been swollen and who was scorched a lovely scarlet, declared: "Certainly it's worth it. I want a tan, and I don't mind suffering to get it."

Others tinted the same hue were in an equally philosophic turn of mind. "After all, it's all over in a few days anyway and look what you have to show for it," quoth another.

Most, however, counseled moderation. One conservative bather said "that a sunburn gives a girl a good healthy look, but girls who go out into the sun and stay until they are burnt to a crisp so that all activities are halted, are carrying things too far and only succeed in looking like overboiled lobsters."

Still another stated that she does not "think much of this turning black."

As a rule, most of the co-eds believed that a sun-tan is worth the effort, but that it should be taken slowly and stopped when one reaches the shade most becoming to her.

Purpose of the book is to survey the political leadership, personalities and traits of national political figures and their ability to influence public opinion.

Campus Bridge Tourney Slated To Begin April 22

A campus-wide duplicate bridge tournament is scheduled for the week of April 22, sponsored by the Tournament Committee of the Student Union Board under the direction of Dr. Hobart Ryland, head of the Department of Romance Languages. The tournament will be held in the card room of the Union building. Couples wishing to enter may sign up any day from April 15 through April 19, on a sheet of paper which will be posted on the bulletin board opposite the game room in the Union building. An entry fee of 25 cents will be required of each person entering, which may be paid at the time of the couple's first match.

The preliminary tournament will be played off on succeeding days: Monday, April 22, from 1 to 3 p.m.; Tuesday, from 2 to 4 p.m.; Wednesday, from 3 to 5 p.m.; and Thursday, from 4 to 6 p.m. It is hoped that by staggering the periods each couple will be able to find one day is convenient for them. The date for the finals will be set at the time most convenient for the contestants.

Rules and methods used in a duplicate bridge tournament will be explained by Dr. Ryland at the beginning of each day's playing. In a duplicate tournament, each table plays exactly the same hand, and the score for each couple is kept.

Four couples from each day's competition will be selected to enter the finals.

Us Democrats

A few of the students in a class were listening to the professor; at least they had the appearance of attentiveness. The subject was economics, and at the moment, the pro and con of Henry George's "Single Tax Theory" was being discussed.

One true son of the South stirred from his lethargy, and asked the professor if this Mr. George wasn't a socialist. The professor answered in the affirmative, whereupon the "true son" asked, in classic tones, "Well, why do you want to teach us democrats socialist doctrines?"

After a few moments of deep quiet, a far-off sound was heard, which could have been Senator Claghorn applauding from Allen's alley, or it may have been just a woodpecker tapping upon a nearby tree.

Oh What It Seems To Be

By Polly Tuttle

"It looks like a drunk man's liver!"

"The blue's pretty, but the yellow is too bright."

The topic of conversation is the Union lounge, which in the process of being painted, is distinctly multi-colored. The ceilings are light blue, the wall where the service flag hangs is a dark blue, the other walls are a pinkish brown, all with a yellow and peach border near the ceiling. The walls upstairs near the Blue-grass room are bright yellow.

It seems that many students dislike the paint job because it is "too bright" or "too gaudy." Yet many art students agree on liking the colors. One art student said it "very interestingly emphasizes the architectural details." That's good, she said. Another art student said it was "modern and exciting in a nice way."

What Would Color Experts Say?

"Hues which approach red have almost universally been considered as warm colors and those which tend toward blue, cool," says Walter Sargent in his book, "Enjoyment and the Use of Color." Thus the pinkish brown and the yellow walls would be called warm. This association of warmth and coldness to colors, Mr. Sargent says, has been made because when the body is chilled its color tends towards a hue more bluish than the natural flush of warmth. Then too, he says, warm things such as fire and sunlight are warm in themselves. Thus, it could be concluded that people who sit near the yellow wall will feel a little warmer than those who sit near the blue wall.

Faber Birren in his book, "Functional Color," goes a step further in saying, "Bright colors simulate the intensity and brilliance of daylight, and people in such an environment are wide awake and alert."

Yellow, Birren says, to some quack healers was good for the brain and was an antidote for insanity. Among Christian peoples, he says, it often stands in poor repute and in France in the tenth century the doors of the homes of criminals, felons, and traitors were painted yellow.

"Blue, on the other hand," Birren says, "is the universal favorite, perhaps being the most popular color among peoples of all ages. Because it is the color of the heavens, many gods and statues were painted blue to indicate divine origin. In Mexico blue is worn for mourning, Birren says."

Birren and Sargent claim that large areas of warm color such as yellow quicken the pulse and blue areas slow it. Birren says, "It is known that the eye changes its focus when seeing color, and it may be that this physiological reaction is accompanied by an emotional response."

It can be concluded that, although the Union may look like a "drunk man's liver," you can feel warm by sitting near the yellow wall and cool by sitting near the blue wall; yellow may help your mental powers, and the blue may make you feel holy. Just sit near the color that fits your mood.

Miss Alice Phillips, a 'true asphalt man,' busy at work testing highway materials. Miss Phillips is the only woman student in the civil engineering department at the University.

Saga Of A Lady-Cement Mixer

By James Kourke

This is the saga of the lady-cement-mixer, and to those as unversed as we are in the intricacies of highway construction and building design, her story is indeed one fraught with mystery and amazement.

The lady is Miss Alice Phillips, brunette from the Bronx, senior at the University, and the only woman in the civil engineering department of the University's college of engineering. Her specialty is highways, their location and construction—and we might as well let it be known right from the start that she's an asphalt man.

We found Miss Phillips ensconced behind a drawing board in the Engineering building, busily engaged in working on plans for the design of a railroad bridge. Besides the bridge design, she was also working on a contour map that would show how much water will flow into a theoretical dam at Louisville. Even in this era of democracy and woman's suffrage we are always a bit startled to see a skirt in what is sometimes narrowly and maliciously referred to as a "man's field"; so, being humble and ignorant and darned curious, we asked the inevitable question.

"But there are hundreds of women all over the country who study engineering," Alice exclaimed. "I study it because I like it, because I've always been interested in it."

Whereupon she led us into an inner office, to a big filing case full of drawings and plans for all sorts of things done by a great many different people. Among the drawings were several by Miss Phillips, illustrating the structure and design of a steel roof—not a twin-gabled affair for a vine-covered cottage but a roof for a large industrial plant or some similar edifice. The design itself was a magnificent complication of figures, angles, and rivets, and attached to it was a small encyclopedia (compiled by Miss Phillips) explaining how much snow the roof would hold, and how much wind it would take to blow the roof away. Separate designs were made for riveting and welding. The engineer has to take into consideration all these factors, not to mention expansion, contraction, general wear and tear, and a hundred other detrimental forces. To us the entire thing was a stupendous and incomprehensible achievement representing a vast expenditure of time and effort, and we said so.

"It seemed very difficult at the time," Alice murmured. And it was then we decided that any report we might make on the activities of the Engineering department would be from a purely pedestrian level.

But apparently roofs and dams and bridges play second fiddle to Miss Phillips' first love in Engineering—highways, their construction, how to make them better. As stated in the beginning, she thinks that asphalt makes and will make the best roads, because asphalt roads are easier to build, cost less, and last longer. Advocates of concrete roads have their arguments too, but there appears to be a definite antipathy between the two schools of thought. "Why, asphalt men don't even speak to concrete men," she informed us, sparking our imagination to pictures of icy silences on the academic lawn.

Alice has just completed a study in testing materials, so she took us down to the Engineering school's concrete testing lab, to give us an on-the-scene account of what the study involves. It requires each student to mix up fifteen batches of concrete, each according to a different formula, then to test the mixture for "slump," which means just what it implies. After this the concrete is put in cylinders and allowed to harden and "cure." Curing is done in a special room ("I thought it was a refrigerator when I first saw it," said Alice) wherein the cylinders are subjected to a constant spray of water and a temperature of about 70 degrees, for 28 days. This is because it takes 28 days for a new concrete highway to "set" before it can bear traffic.

After curing, the concrete cylinders are placed in a vertical vise-like machine and subjected to varying degrees of pressure until the concrete cracks and crumbles—whereupon the student notes the exact amount of pressure per square inch that a particularly formulated concrete mixture will bear. Alice illustrated the value of the experiment by pointing out that it would be rather silly just to build a sidewalk that would withstand a pressure of 6,000 pounds per square inch. We said yes, it would be rather silly.

Trundling across to the highway experimental lab, we met Mr. Burns, an affiliate of the Kentucky state highway department who runs the laboratory in cooperation with the college of engineering. Mr. Burns is justly proud of his workshop, because most of the methods used in the laboratory (and some used by the highway department) were developed by the laboratory itself. There we were bombarded with much information concerning the wear-value of certain compositions of asphalt, and the virtues of coarse and fine aggregates (aggregates being the various sized stones used in making different kinds of asphalt.) Mr. Burns, like Alice, is an old asphalt man, and from him we learned that the building of roads is a comparatively new science with an interesting background and an amazing future. In fact, the laboratory itself is an adventure worth investigating, and Mr. Burns will be happy to welcome visitors.

Of particular interest to us was an apparatus resembling an oversized washing-machine capable of producing any kind of weather the experimenter desires. It is used to test the effect of weather on anything from paving material to the paint that's used to draw the line down the middle of the highway, and when we were there Mr. Burns was using a combination of hot sun and hard rain to try the durability of paint on 1947 license plates. The effect was obtained by the use of two carbon arcs and a spray, and the observed used a special helmet for looking inside the machine.

For no obvious reason, the machine-made sun reminded us that it was time for lunch, so we thanked Mr. Burns and departed for a local hamburger stand. As we crossed South Limestone street, Alice remarked that this was "a very nice highway" indeed, because it had been made of asphalt. We could do nothing but agree with Alice.

They're Vague About 'Vague'

By Lenora Henry

"When is it coming out?" is a question asked by many on the campus. A weary staff smiles and says, "Soon."

Practically a year has passed since twenty girls began to think of starting a campus magazine. The idea has grown, the staff has learned a great deal, the way is open for publication, the campus is asking "when."

Vague Was Vague

A year ago an idea was born in someone's mind, the idea of a campus magazine. It began as a simple thing, possibly mimeographed, very elemental, just a small way of expressing literary genius at the University. It could be like that only until it was presented to a group of girls who decided that a campus had to have a magazine.

Overnight it took on the glamour of a national publication. It grew into a large size "because the reader prefers a large size," they said.

The cover enlarged into a magnificent thing; the pages expanded; mimeographing wouldn't do. This was a real publication.

No Money

Immediately, twenty girls made this a thing of achievement. However, the group had only the talent to write and the desire to work. No money.

In the fall, a staff was formed, and the name "Vague" was chosen. Five months of red tape—certain permissions, certain restrictions, certain differences of opinion as to content.

Five months. Then it was time to gather together some funds and manuscripts. The group sold ads. It was difficult when an advertiser wanted to see a copy of the magazine. "But it is a new thing, circulation a thousand," the twenty said. The advertiser was skeptical.

Finally, it was ready to go to press. The ads were ready, a sizable gift had been presented by a student organization, the manuscripts were good.

Search For Printer

All that the group had to do was have it printed. When it was time to sign a contract, it was a busy time for printers. A search began. At present, there is hope. Although the question "when" continues, the staff can still say, "Soon now, very soon. Be patient."

'The Lowe-Down'

By Dick Lowe

Stoll field has been burning with activity for the last two weeks with baseball, football and track practice underway every afternoon. From 2 p.m. until 6 p.m. Coach Bryant, Coach Moseley or Coach Jacobs has his charges going through their daily workout, getting into playing shape.

Coach Frank Moseley has been looking over about 40 baseball prospects, who have been doing their best to impress him that they are good enough to rate a uniform. So far only 13 have performed capably enough to merit the paraphernalia with six being members of the basketball team. Humsey Yessin and Ralph Beard are holding down the keystone positions at the present and have turned in good performances. Wallace Jones has been the only candidate for first base, with Jack Parkinson and Darrell Loranice in the outfield. Ed Allin appears likely to do most of the catching. Vernon Jones, a returned veteran, was a member of the Wildcats in '42, and according to Coach Moseley, he will send a lot of batters back to the bench hitless with his blazing fast ball. James Powell has also made a good impression on the mound, especially with his fast hook. Dunlap, Trivitt, Rose, Butterman and John Crosthwaite are the others who have been given uniforms.

Coach Moseley has scheduled eleven games for this season but said that next season he expected to schedule 20 to 25 games. This year's schedule calls for games with local competition but next year he is going to play Southeastern and Big Ten competition.

Baseball at the University of Kentucky was of top notch quality in 1931 and then from 1937 to '41 was as good as any in the South. Moseley, who was coach of the diamond from '37 to '41, said that it would take about three years to develop a good team but that the University of Kentucky would then have teams ranking along with the best of college teams. After football practice is over Charlie Kuhn, Jesse Tunstall, Bill Moseley, Bill Chambers, and Dick Hensley will be on the team. The schedule arranged so far is:

April 27—Georgetown	Here
May 1—Georgetown	There
May 4—Cincinnati	Here
May 8—Eastern	There
May 11—Murray	Here
May 15—Eastern	Here
May 21—Cincinnati	There
May 24—Ohio University	Here
May 25—Ohio University	Here
May 27—Ohio University	There
May 28—Ohio University	There

Coach Bear Bryant was pleased and encouraged after the last several practices. The spirit and the fight that was so lacking at one time finally has been found and the team looks better with every practice. The fighting spirit of the team seems to have been installed by the return of former veterans, who want to play football to win. Coach Bryant said, "I am extremely pleased with the spirit and fight the team has shown in the recent practices, especially with the kind that Charlie Kuhn, Charlie Bradshaw and Jay Rhodemyer have shown. The way they play someone is liable to get hurt."

Ermal Allen Eligible For Another Year

By Hoot Combs

If and when Ermal Allen reports to Coach Bear Bryant for next season's football campaign the Wildcats' chances for a winning team will be greatly enhanced. The blond passing wizard would be a valuable addition to any team, and that includes the professional squads Allen was attempting to contact when he learned he would be eligible for another season at UK.

Ermal played during the '39, '40, and '41 seasons and then had to report for Army duty. At that time the rules allowed four years of competition regardless of classification. During those seasons his passing was a bright light in the Wildcat offensive efforts.

Weighing in at about 160, Allen should prove to be a much better athlete now that he has had additional experience. He played on General Robert Neyland's arm all-star team that played three professional teams in eight days and during the 1943 season he made the all-southern, all-ervice team as a half-back with the 330th. Infantry team at Fort Benning.

Versatile Ermal also made letters in golf and basketball, while he was in UK, chosen on the All-Southern team in the latter sport.

Ermal and Mrs. Allen, the former Allie Garnett Kendall, now make their home in Cynthiana.

The University of Utah, for the benefit of students' fathers who might think that the education of one son or daughter costs a lot revealed that in one semester in 1839, 23 out of 150 students in the university had the same father—Brigham Young.

Cincinnati Wins 4-2

By Hal Yard

Stoll field was featured this week with some major league baseball. The Cincinnati Reds overcame the Boston Red Sox 4 to 2, to thrill a partisan Reds crowd of nearly 10,000.

It was a third-inning home run by Cincinnati's Eddie Miller with two men on that highlighted the afternoon's scoring. The Reds' first run came in the first inning when Dain Clay tripped and Grady Hatton followed with a double.

The Red Sox were held scoreless until the ninth. Then after Tommy Carey grounded out, Sam Mele got a single, and George Metkovich slammed a three bagger down the left field line scoring Mele. Al Flair grounded out to second, but Metkovich crossed the plate for another tally. Eddie McGah claimed a single, and just as it was beginning to look bad for the Reds, Glenn Russell pinch hitting for Otis Clark grounded out ending the game.

Nate Andrews a veteran right-hander went the entire distance for Cincinnati, while Boston used five hurlers. Joe Dobson started for the Red Sox and pitched the first two innings. He was relieved by Earl Johnson who allowed the Reds their biggest rally. Randy Heflin, Mickey Harris, and Otis Clark came to the mound for Boston in that order.

The Reds acquired seven hits in their eight turns at the plate. The Red Sox accounted for eight hits—three of them in the last inning.

The game which was the final in the exhibition series between the two teams still left Boston on top with 10 wins to the Reds seven.

Spring Sports Getting Under Way

- By Don B. Towles
- Coach Sully Jacobs announced yesterday that the UK track team was in pretty good shape for their coming meet with TPI a week from tomorrow. Jacobs said that men had been assigned to different events and, although the positions were not definite, the team, as a whole, was about ready for the meet. Only one other track meet has been scheduled, that being with Georgetown.
- Athletic director Bernie Shively also announced yesterday that golf coach Frank Atkins has announced to him that everyone wanting to participate in the golf matches or be on the UK golf team must sign up by April 13 at the Picadome course. The players are now in the process of qualifying and to qualify a player must have played 54 holes of golf by April 17. The players must keep record of the scores made during this period and turn them in to Coach Atkins, who will, from the score turned in, select the golf team. The meets here at Lexington will probably be played at the Ashland course, according to director Shively. However, this is not definite.

Laboratory in a Birch Thicket

This thicket of birch trees is one of the Bell System's scientific workshops.

Here our scientists have strung telephone wires through the crowded branches to learn just how much tree rubbing and abuse the protective coverings and insulation on new types of wire will stand.

Important? With more than fifteen million insulated "drop wires" connecting home and business telephones to nearby poles, we've got to be sure that the wire we use is the very best that can be produced.

This is but one small example of hundreds of experiments and research projects carried on constantly by Bell Laboratories to make Bell Telephone Service more dependable, more useful, to more people.
